

Elimination of Mixed-sex Hospital Accommodation

The Department of Health has given a clear public commitment to eliminating mixed-sex accommodation for hospital inpatients.

Three objectives were set for the NHS, designed to deliver single-sex accommodation. They apply to all NHS trusts providing inpatient accommodation. The objectives are:

- i. to ensure that appropriate organisational arrangements are in place to secure good standards of privacy and dignity for hospital patients;
- ii. to achieve the Patient's Charter standard for segregated washing and toilet facilities across the NHS; and
- iii. to provide safe facilities for patients in hospitals who are mentally ill which safeguard their privacy and dignity

The following pages indicate progress against these objectives.

Notes:

Single-sex accommodation is defined as separate sleeping areas for men and women, segregated bathroom and toilet facilities for men and women and, in those trusts providing mental health services, safe facilities for the mentally ill.

This can take a number of forms. NHS Trusts may provide single-sex wards, or combinations of single rooms and single-sex bays.

The following pages do not include NHS Trusts with no inpatient accommodation,
